Doan's Kidney Pills, A Modern Medicine for Every Kidney Ill.

Mr. T. H. Hughes, of Saxtons River, Vt., employed by B. F. Locke & Co., says: "My kidneys did not act properly for years, and it gradually grew on me. For two or three years they troubled me very much with a dull, aching pain across my back and in my loins. I stood on my feet for a long length of time, I felt the pain across my back more and my legs became numb. When the pain in my back got so bad that I could stand it no longer, I put on plasters, and I used a great many of them, but they only afforded me temporary relief. I also used medicines of all kinds, but they did not reach the cause. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and so well recommended that I was induced to give them a trial, and I got them at Andrew's drug store. They gave me immediate relief. After the treatment I seldom felt any symptoms of my former troubles, but when I did I took a few of Doan's Kidney Pills and it soon left me. My rheumatic pains were not so severe, and I did not have that tired, languid feeling. I had more energy in doing my work and give all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me a great deal of good, and I feel justified in recommending them to others as a good and reliable medicine."

HEARTS By HALLIE ERMINE RIVES

Copyright, 1902, by The Bowditch-Merrill Company

Armand had remained quiet, but as the stroke fell twice again he trembled. The woman's lips were tight together. "No, no, no!" she said between them. "I not tell you! I not tell you—never!"

"Curse her!" Jarrot gasped furiously. "Lay on, there, you! I say I'll have it out of her!"

The wielder of the rawhide paused to tuck up his sleeve. The men who held her relaxed their hold for an instant, and she sank down on the floor with closed eyes.

"They will kill her!" sobbed Anne, clutching her uncle's arm. "They will kill her!"

"Stand her up again!" commanded Jarrot.

Armand had grown very white. At Anne's sob he strained forward in the grasp of the soldiers and cried: "Tell him! I command you to tell him!"

The woman opened her eyes, looked at him searchingly and uncertainly, then smiled and tried to shake her head. "I—not—tell!"

They dragged her roughly up again, but her legs would not support her. She seemed not to hear Jarrot's shouted question in her ear. He looked at this the delegates of New York and Pennsylvania had loud objection. Henry gnashed his teeth in the convention at Williamsburg, and on May 15 a resolution was passed directing the Virginia delegates in Philadelphia to "declare the united colonies free and independent states."

A significant word! Richard Henry Lee followed in June with his resolution for independence.

But alas for human failing! Many of the delegates, Dickinson, Morris, Livingston, were men of property, and the possession of property enlarges the bump of caution. They cried for delay. The older Quakers, men of peace, had set their faces and their faith against rebellion.

New York was milk and water. There had been the failure of the Canadian expedition, and, besides, the province had its exposed harbor and the Indian raids on its frontier to think of. The Pennsylvania delegation refused to vote on separation and left their seats in anger. Maryland had few grievances.

And what of New Jersey? There was Toryism entrenched. Its royal governor, the son of the benevolent faced patriot, Benjamin Franklin, went breathing fire against the Whigs. Not till he had been shipped to Connecticut in iron, not till congress had sent three of its members to argue, to plead, to storm, did its assembly declare for freedom.

Think not that those who hesitated were not men of honor, jealous for the welfare of their country. Not every one believed George III. another such despot as Philip II. of Spain or the bloody minded man the radicals generally called him. The storm was high on the horizon. And if it is the part of wisdom to count well the cost of desperate ventures. Against the colonies was pitted the mistress of the seas—a king, innumerable battalions, armament, navies, money and the prestige of hereditary possession. The colonies stood alone.

There were those who, like Henry, whose clear eye saw the future as with divination, pinned faith upon Gallie's enmity to England and looked for a sign of aid. But the months came and went without its appearance. Now the Third congress was sitting, and France was silent. Granted a defiance to Great Britain, the outcome was doubtful—how doubtful five red years of smoke and blood were to demonstrate.

As the pendulum vibrated a British fleet in the Delaware brought the war within hearing, and Lord Howe hoisted to off Sandy Hook with all his army.

The congress was, after all, a miniature of the country. It held a Tory party who awaited some disaster to become dangerous. It held faint hearts who croaked, despondent ones who predicted ruin and brave hearts that dared a struggle they believed would be uncertain.

On such a field for twenty-five long days a determined battle was fought. It ended at last, and one evening Thomas Jefferson of Virginia betook himself to a little house back of an oblong green, where lived Dr. Franklin, and wrote the first draft of the Declaration of Independence.

There comes a time in the history of every great movement when it must go forward or die. Lethargy breeds reaction. The fierce fight for a Declaration had marked this point now. In the three days since the vote the opposition had gathered its shattered forces. There were new mutterings, and the little Virginian delegation in the shop of Mr. James Randolph on High street knew that the defiance which was to be offered on the morrow, if it were to be signed at all, must be signed quickly.

So out of a humid morning grew the afternoon of the 3d of July for Philadelphia. It came in heat, with a brazen sky.

Opposite Mr. Randolph's shop on the same evening Joseph Galloway, the lawyer, walking slowly, paused and looked across the street. He was thick-set and middle aged, with a smooth, curly face and restless eyes.

He had lacked Willing patriotism in the first congress. The second would have none of him. And yet he had earlier led the popular party against the proprietary. Such strange overturnings the new idea of freedom was bringing about. The fierce Tory rancor which had made of this man at first "the defender of the prerogative" was to convert him later into a spy, a refugee and a sour pensioner of George III.

Now, there was the open hatred of a bitter Tory in the look Joseph Galloway cast upon the little shop.

"Good day, Mordecai," he said in greeting to a rotund merchant Quaker who joined him. "I see you also looking. What think you our Virginia hot bloods will brew next in their den yonder?"

The Quaker frowned. "I love them not," he answered. "What saith the Scriptures? 'For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds.'"

"Gentlemen of birth and wealth, forsooth," continued Galloway angrily, "and yet prating like the veriest clowns of independence and brotherhood! Whose was the bill to separate from Great Britain? Richard Henry Lee's. And who has written the Declaration that is to be thrust beneath the delegates' noses tomorrow? Thomas Jefferson. These Virginians! Would we had never heard of Virginia before we came to this!"

"Look you"—He broke off, and pointed with his stick where a coach bowed along High street. It was richly furnished and bore arms on its panels. On the cushions, exquisitely dressed in a white uniform, sat a blocky, military looking man with bushy hair and foreign mustachios. He wore a cocked hat.

"Tis M. Phelan," said the Quaker. "These French parasites with powder to peddle, Friend! Joseph, would you see the colonies plunged into bloody strife. They would batten on our extremity, for whosoever the carcass

MONTH'S TRIAL FREE.

Breathes Hyomei Three or Four Times Daily and Be Cured of Catarrh.

The Noyes Drug Store, one of the most reliable business firms in Norway, has seen many instances of the remarkable power of Hyomei to cure catarrhal troubles and other disorders of the respiratory organs. Results in this treatment have given them so much confidence in Hyomei that they will give a month's trial with the positive understanding that if at the end of that time a cure is not effected or enough relief gained to warrant a continued use of the treatment for a while longer, the money will be refunded.

Hyomei is the only treatment for catarrh that has ever been sold under a "no cure, no pay" plan, and the only one where a month's trial treatment is free unless it cures.

Hyomei is not a pill or liquid. Just breathe it through the neat inhaler that comes with every outfit, and benefit will be seen from the first day's use. Breathe in this way, the health-giving Hyomei penetrates to the minutest air cells of the lungs, and drives catarrhal germs and poisons from the system.

The complete outfit costs but $1, and extra bottles of Hyomei may be obtained for 50c.

Remember that if Hyomei does not cure you after a month's trial, the Noyes Drug Store will refund your money and the treatment will be absolutely free.

THE MOTHER'S COLUMN.

Do Mothers Favor Their Sons?

It is said that "the outlooker sees most of the game;" therefore the woman who is not married or the wife who has no children is best able to note the peculiar tendencies of the life and mother.

And from this standpoint of an outsider the truth is forced home to every observant outsider that mothers in general are very much more partial to their sons than to their daughters. And yet in nine cases out of ten—when confronted with the accusation that they are making fish and fowl—so to speak—of their own children, they will bluntly deny it.

Women are subtle creatures, and would sometimes even hide from themselves, if they could, their own wrong doings.

And yet there is the occasional mother who is willing to admit that she is fonder of her sons than her daughters. As a woman said to me, "Why, it is perfectly natural for a mother to be fonder of her sons than her daughters. Every mother is; and I know that I was always fonder of mine."

"Well," I said, "then it is a blessed thing that your little daughter died, for she would have felt your neglect and it would have saddened and embittered her life."

"Perhaps," she said, "it was unkind of me to say this, as she died before my daughter was three years old, while her two sons are living. And yet it was hardly unkind on my part, either, for while she had but one daughter, and although she, the baby, was laid away in her grave, she could still admit that she was always fonder of her boys."

Mothers Should Spank More and Weep Less.

Sometimes I amuse myself by speculating on what state of affairs would be if mothers were left over to rear wayward children, and spanked more. Every woman speaks of her children's conduct, when they turn out badly, as a mysterious dispensation of Providence. It's a sneaking way to try to get out of responsibility. She has been too weak, or too selfish, or too lazy to raise them right. Then the day comes when she discovers that her daughter is a neeeting fast young man on the street, or some night her boy comes home staggering drunk and she can do nothing but cry over them. It is one of the great tragedies of life when a mother sees the young lives that are dearer to her than her own, and the young souls that she would give her own to save, hang trem bling in the balance and she can meet the situation with nothing but tears.

Tears Useless as a Reforming Agent.

It has also always appeared to me that women have wasted quite an unnecessary amount of tears on their husbands. For a thousand generations wives have clung to the theory that a man could be wept into all virtues of the cherubim and seraphim. When a woman had a drunken husband, she got up and opened the door for him in the early hours of the morning and bedewed him with tears. When she had a brutal one, she wept when he mistreated her, but she forgot him and let him go on doing it. If their husbands were unfaithful to them, they shed a few barrels of tears and let it go at that. Now tears as a reforming agent are not worth a pinch of the salt that is in them. They don't work, and men never make the mistake of using them. Men never weep over women's misdoings. They make their wives behave themselves, or else they haul them up before the divorce court, and that's why the percentage of good conduct is so largely in favor of the fair sex.

"Them That Dance Must Pay the Fiddler."

That Maine genius of Maine, Uncle Solon Chase gave this rare and racy tale before a board of trade recently:

He began by saying that one of the shortest speeches he ever made was "There's too much hog in the dollar." That was many years ago, and times have changed since then. Methods have out the gold dollar in two. As a consequence, farms that were worth $100 are now worth $200, because there's more money with which to buy them. Years ago Horace Greely said, "Young men go West," but if he was alive to-day and kicking—and he'd be kicking if he was alive, (laughter) he'd say, "Young men, stay in the East."

New England is the best section of the country. If we should annex New England to Maine, we'd want New York for a sheep pasture (laughter). Maine has more salt water, more lumber and more good farming land than any other state. It is the center of the best apple belt. If we put as much sheep as we could on our orchards as the people of Argostol county do into their potato fields, our hills would be covered with apple trees and land would be worth $100 an acre. Why? Partly because the dollar is growing smaller and there's less hog in it.

But everything is not ideal, and are not as we are going to have them. Rum selling is wrong, but so long as there is a demand for liquor as a beverage, some one will sell it to get the almighty dollar. Resubmission is a backward step. We can use the law as a lever, but we must use friendliness as fulcrum. We've got to get at the boys and raise them so they'll not know the taste of rum when they're men.

We must learn to love our neighbor as ourselves. If we did there'd be no need of food or food fannies. No doubt if we were placed in a position to manage a monopoly, we'd charge some citizens more than others, because of our greed to get the almighty dollar uncontrolled by brotherly love. It is human nature to raise the price of oil.

If at a bank should discover a way to be sure, the millionaire has responsibilities and strains on his mind that the man don't have who makes tracks in a barnyard. (Laughter.) The rich are too much engrossed with their private affairs to give attention to public matters. It's the man of moderate means who has the time to settle the affairs of the country.

I believe generations to come will eliminate war as a pastime and rum as a beverage. But in spite of all our wars and rum and wars, the world is better in spots than it was 50 years ago. Our grand and great-grandchildren will give their attention more to peaceful pursuits than we have. They will wonder why we, the most enlightened nation in the world, fought our brothers to free the slaves, when in one year enough is paid in pensions alone to have freed the slaves.

Good as our schools are they should be improved. We should make them so attractive that the children would cry to go. What is taught the children in the nursery and schoolroom will be the platform of the people. If better love is in the hearts of our statesmen they will not go astray. It is the hand that rocks the cradle that rules the head of the nation. A mother has more influence over the boy than the father. If a child is in danger, he always runs to his mother.

I went fishing one Sunday morning when I was a boy. Got up before the other folks were awake. After catching three good trout I went home because I had a feeling that it wasn't just right to go fishing on Sunday. When I went in to my father said:

"Solon, you know it isn't right to go fishing." He looked stern and I expected to have my jacket tanned.

My mother told me to clean the fish, which I did. As the odor of the fresh trout, frying, reached my father, his expression changed. His face didn't look so elongated—it looked more natural. (Laughter.) We ate the trout for breakfast and my father ate as much as I did. After breakfast my mother called me to her side and said:

"Solon, I wish you wouldn't go fishing any more on Sunday."

I didn't promise her that I wouldn't, but I did promise her that I'd cut the stove wood finer and I did. Somehow after that I didn't have any desire to go fishing Sunday again, and never have been from that day to this.

My mother conquered me with kind words and love, she conquered father with the smell of fresh trout. (Laughter.) I like to trip the light fantastic too, but I always have had money enough to pay the fiddler.

A Musical Success.
The grand concert at Odeon Hall last Tuesday evening under the direction of Prof. Scott Wright was a grand success in the stage effect, being a rare treat for all music-lovers present. The attendance was not large, but the enthusiasm extended in way of scores showed the appreciation of the hearers, and it continued in nearly every instance until the artists made a second appearance. Rev. Stanford Mitchell was recalled each time. On one occasion he came to the stage and bowed a recognition to the call of the audience, thinking it would be sufficient, but not so, he had to come forward "just once more." The Class of 1904, Norway High School, Graduates. Exercises at Opera House Largely Attended.

Once more the whirling wheel of time has brought up to the graduation season. Once again the swiftly flying hours have swung into the days of merry June, and with them has come the passing of another class of young men and young women, who have completed the four years' high school study supplementing the years of instruction in lower grades. The class, which on Tuesday evening took their diplomas, was the largest class ever graduated from Norway High School and numbered 22—12 men and 10 young ladies.

On account of the size of the class this year an innovation was made, which was the assignment of class parts for graduation evening, consisting of salutatory, history, poem, prophecy, presentation of gifts, essay, oration and valedictory. There was also a speaking contest held on the evening of March 24. As is customary yearly elaborate preparations were made for this crowning event of the school life. The stage decorations were in red and white, and were certainly most attractive. At either end of the stage were banks of potted plants and ferns, which also decorated the positions on the stage. The opening was fastened the motto, "Neque ne deriver pas," and the cabalistic monogram "O4." The ladies were all handsomely gowned in the purple of white. The men wore neat suits of black.

Practically every seat that could be brought into the Opera House was occupied when a short time after eight Stearns' Orchestra of 12 men with Izah Pike, pianist, struck up a march. Slowly in perfect time, the class headed by Marshal Alvin L. Cotton marched to seats at the front of the hall. Seats upon the platform were taken by Messrs. J. A. Roberts and G. E. Tubbs of the school committee, Superintendent C. P. Barnes, and the school faculty, Principal V. M. Whitman, Sub-master P. E. Hathaway, Assistant Grace B. Bicknell. After another orchestral selection an earnest prayer was offered by Rev. E. S. Cotton of the Baptist church. Each of the speakers was characterized by a clearness of tone, pleasing manner and ease which was remarkable.

Ida Mae Marston gave the salutatory, Theme, Greatness. The elements of greatness were designated as wisdom, gracefulness and good will, or as the individual, self-knowledge, self-reliance, self-control and self respect, and are rooted in the conscience, genius and talents. There is no limit to true greatness, which consists not alone in attainment but in character. There is no royal, no easy road to greatness, no smooth way to scholarship. The speaker welcomed in appreciative words the citizens, school committee, teachers and classmates to the exercises of the evening. The anticipated, looked for day brings sadness as well as joy as the way part.

Eva Grace Goodwin gave the history in rhyme, in which were recited the pleasant things of the past, ignoring the unpleasant which with joy one might forget. The class entered freshmen year with thirty members. Failing by the way, referring to other years, have reduced the number, notwithstanding accessions, to the present score and two. Three finished the classical course, three the academic and the sixteen remaining were students of the English branches. Entering junior year an entirely new corps of teachers were received, have been with the school to the close of the course. In junior year two important events were the Halloween ride and the establishing of class socials; of senior year, an expedition to Mount Mica and the successful lecture course. The several graduates' characteristic qualities were wittily reviewed.

The orator was Carl Pride Mixer, president of the class, and his theme Some Important Factors in the Education of Youth. Education must meet the demands of modern life, and must consist of these factors: reason, truthfulness, investigation, systemization, and carrying in action the learned principles. The school is but a part of the educational system, the even more important factors being the home and out-of-door life with nature association. With these must come attention to man's social duties, and in civic affairs, as a contribution to the life of the community. Should be good training for future citizenship in schools and college.

Miriam Louise Calef was class poet, and her theme, Lessons Learned from Nature. It gave a very beautiful description of the early dawn of spring, of a day in June, of a summer day and of autumn, a fitting description of a day in the field, of the flowers in the woodland, and of a summer sunset, when one holds with a scene of old ocean's side.

The prophecy by Charlotte J. Young was an original one, and which elicited favorable comment. It was called the Jingle book of 1904 and was written in the Mother Goose style, with drawings which were very cute and fetching, reflecting the future of the classmate. Alvin L. Cotton was pictured as an athlete; Maurice V. Brown was to be a blacksmith; Claribel T. DeCosta as a nurse in the Red Cross society and goes to the front with Co. D; Cora M. Dexter was pictured as a spinster with nine cats; Ethel M. Bradbury was prophesied as a milliner; George L. Sanborn was to be a coal baron; Grace Goodwin as a talented author writes a famous book on styles; Harold A. Anderson is to be a noted singer; Harrington Mann was pictured as the sole man of the class; John Austin, the orator, was pictured as a stump speaker; Cleora Merrill, matron of a children's home; Miriam Calef and Mae Marston are famous wives; Edward Burnell is a noted hypnotist; Carl Mixer, the president, is to be a minister; Reginald Dismore, officer in the regular army; Tessa Thibodeau is to drive at a horse show; William Horne and William Millett, policemen.

Tessa Ray Thibodeau had an essay on the Beauties of Nature. Her address was most impressive of the several seasons' typical days, the beauty of spring's royal day ushered in by singing birds and the delicate coloring of the sunrise, and closed in the glory of a Maine sunset.
